Venus seeks at-home interns. Yep, seems like the perfect job. Only you don't get paid. The good part is that you can work in your pajamas, and there are definitely lots of perks that we cannot discuss in print. The other good part is that you'll get the opportunity to work on projects that get your writing, photographs, art work and/or ideas published. It's also a good thing to add to your resume. Venus is flexible.
 Very flexible. Internships are not limited to the straight-up editorial department. If you're into copy editing, advertising, research or web design, we're down witcha. We'll even consider giving you a different title if you're not into the word intern. By at-home, we mean doing work through the mail and e-mail. If this sounds like something you'd like to get more information about, please send e-mail to VENUSMAG@AOL.COM.

we want you, we need you

One of Venus' biggest goals is to act as a forum for our readers. The best way to do that, we think, is to ask Venus readers to contribute to the magazine. The following is a list of the special features sections that will appear in the May 2000 issue. We're looking for shortish writing pieces. You don't have to worry about writing all fancy (unless you really want to). Just write what you think -- write how you speak. You can e-mail your pieces to: Venusmag@aol.com.

1. We want to know what you'd invent. It can be absolutely anything: a scientific concoction, a new form of dance, a new form of communication, a new social movement -- anything. If you want, you can fill us in on all the tiny details of how you'd go about creating your invention. But it's not required.
2. We also want to know your worst job, your absolute dream-it-up job (use your imagination to the max here). Or if you have a super-dope job right now (or know someone who does and want to write a profile on her), we want to hear all about it.
3. We're not done asking for your help yet, because Venus always wants to know who we need to know about. We're starting a special section where readers submit a profile of a woman who deserves recognition. She could be a musician, artist, political activist, yourself, your mother, whomever. When answering any of these questions, be sure to tell us your name, age, address, phone number and any other biographical information about yourself, such as your current job. We're also planning to start a section that features the music scene -- and the women who contribute to it -- in your town. We'd like to know what bands are out there, what venues they play at, etc. Photos are always good too.
