

What is it?

CC Aotearoa New Zealand is the New Zealand collaborator of Creative Commons International, which is a project of Creative Commons, the creator of the Creative Commons licences.

Creative Commons is a worldwide organisation that offers copyright alternatives (beyond the traditional 'all rights reserved') to teachers, scholars, scientists, writers, photographers, filmmakers, musicians, graphic designers, Web hobbyists, artists, and other content developers for use anywhere in the world.

The Creative Commons project in Aotearoa New Zealand is run by Te Whāinga Aronui The Council for the Humanities.

<http://www.creativecommons.org.nz/>

More Info

To find out more about Creative Commons, and for a full list of possible licences, see the following resources:

Creative Commons Aotearoa New Zealand

<http://www.creativecommons.org.nz/>

Creative Commons International

<http://www.creativecommons.org/>

Te Whāinga Aronui The Council for the Humanities

<http://www.humanities.org.nz/>

If you have an inquiry, please don't hesitate to contact us:

Creative Commons Aotearoa New Zealand

PO Box 10-693,

Wellington

Site Administrator: Alastair Pharo

admin@creativecommons.org.nz

Te Whāinga Aronui The Council for the Humanities

Executive Director: Dr Brian Opie

brian.opie@humanities.org.nz

Share, exchange, learn, benefit, publish.

Creative Commons aims to establish a fair middle way between the extremes of copyright control and the uncontrolled exploitation of intellectual property.

It provides a range of copyright licences, freely available for public use, which allow those creating intellectual property – including authors, artists, educators and scientists – to mark their work with the freedoms they want it to carry.

<http://www.creativecommons.org.nz/>