

Science, Spirit and Service

Science and spirituality are two ways we as human beings seek to understand and find our place in this world. As we go deeper within each realm we begin to realize that they are complimentary paths; two sides of the same coin one might say. As we open ourselves to questions, to wonder, to exploration, as we look for answers, we gain perspective and if we are lucky, humility. As we understand our own smallness, we can begin to see our greatness within our connectedness to the world we see and the world we can't see. This discovery process naturally leads us to care for others, for animals, for our environment: service. It leads to the ability to see the harmony we know exists because of our faith, and we see as scientists who reveal the underlying patterns of the universe.
